

OCCV Welcomes and Thanks Our New Interns and Volunteers!

Emily Jameson has a Bachelor's degree from Trinity Western University in Inter-Cultural Religious Studies. She is currently working on a Master's degree in Urban Studies and Community Development at Eastern University. Her interests include story and its role within the human experience, traveling, reading, having good conversations, and making mixed CDs. She is passionate about loving people, Stumptown coffee, living out her spiritual journey, and exploring ways to make the world better. Emily is the Community Relations Coordinator Intern for OCCV and is excited about mobilizing churches and Christians for Biblical justice, as well as seeing God's justice and love for humanity be made evident here in Oregon. If you would like to contact Emily, e-mail her at emily@occv.org.

Mary Doyle is a barista by day, justice advocate by night. She seeks world and personal peace through homemade pies and opening her home and life to the community. Mary volunteers in many capacities through Portland's Bridge Church, a ten-year-old faith community dedicated to giving people a voice who would otherwise go unheard. Mary has been mentored for the last two years by the Bridge co-founder and lead Pastor, Deborah Loyd. Mary earned her degree in General Ministries from Simpson University, where she served as Student Chaplain during her senior year. At Simpson, Mary developed a passion for social justice by leading the Social Action Committee, as well as pursuing courses in Cross Cultural Studies, Ministry, and Community Development. Mary is entrepreneurial, creative, and has an engaging high energy. She is very excited to work with OCCV, recognizing the importance public policy has on a community's experience of justice. If you would like to contact Mary, e-mail her at mary@occv.org.

Justin Eder is a nocturnal employee of the Portland Rescue Mission and a member of the Hip Hop group Inkre:mentals. He has a part time job working at Roosevelt High School helping kids in the music studio with creative expressions of sound. Justin moved to Portland 2.5 years ago from Eau Claire, Wisconsin where he was active in event organization and promotion. It was at Eau Claire where he earned a degree in marketing and began a journey into media creation and study of its influence. Justin has a passion for social justice wants the whole Jesus of the gospels to be shared. He believes that artistic communication is most effective way to convey a message. If you would like to contact Justin, e-mail him at justin@occv.org.
